Defending Artistic Freedom – Building Alliances

Focus: Creating open spaces together for women*, queers, trans* persons in arts & culture

Interactive Workshop, with a keynote by Fahim Amir

October 14th 2020, 2pm – 6pm, Online (via ZOOM)

How free are art & culture? In times of Covid-19, amidst an uprising of populist tendencies and a neoliberal economic system in Austria, as well as Europe-wide, free spaces for art and culture are shifting. Precarious structures and marginalization restrict these spaces even further.

However, artistic freedom can only be ensured, if production, distribution and participation, exempt from pressure and influence, are possible - this also includes the social and economic security of artists and cultural workers. Together with artists, cultural workers and as well as everyone interested, a space for exchange will be created in order to strengthen and expand alliances and to develop strategies for strengthening artistic freedom.

The discussions will revolve around central questions:

What forms of restrictions on artistic freedom are we encountering in Austria?

How can we make them more visible – along with being in solidarity with one another?

What joint impactful countermeasures can we take?

Participation is free!

Impulsvortrag	Shrewd tactics Art, power, freedom by Fahim Amir In his keynote, philosopher Fahim Amir takes a critical look at the concept of freedom. After all: Whose freedom are we referring to? Is the understanding of „artistic freedom“ in the conventional sense an appointment of old white men? How can we imagine a new, feminist engagement?
